

CROSS-EYED HEADLIGHTS.

THE GOVERNMENT BOND ISSUE.

The New York Lighting Plan on the New Haven Railroad.

New Haven. Jan. 12.—A new thing in track lighting has been put into service on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad on the new "Air Line Flyer" between New York and New Haven. The cross-eyed headlight, an invention of Col. N. H. Hoyt of the electrical department, and it is said to be such a success that it will be supplied as speedily as possible to all through fast trains on the road that run in the night.

For several days the little smokestacks on locomotives Nos. 119 and 132 of the Air Line train have been still further dwarfed by a second headlight placed alongside the one originally set in front of them. The ordinary headlight is something of an imposing affair, and everyday people have supposed it to be sufficient for the purpose of throwing light ahead so that the engineer in the cab can see what is before him.

But Superintendent Ostrander says that it is not, and explains the use of the two headlights, which it appears are "cross-eyed," or precisely as the eyes are in some cross-eyed persons. The ordinary headlight is something of an impediment to the crossing of the other's rays. The light on the right hand side is thrown over the left, and everyday people have supposed it to be sufficient for the purpose of throwing light ahead so that the engineer in the cab can see what is before him.

The single headlight hitherto in use shined straight ahead, and was something of a curve.

The fields, or whatever is alongside of the tracks upon which the train is dashing along, will be the railroads for the moment in total darkness. With this device set it makes no difference which way the curves turn, for one or the other of the headlights illuminates the pathway.
